GOSSIP OF THE TURF.

The Horseman's dabbler is still harping on the dimensions of the figures I quoted for the rearing and offering of a home bred yearling in a mart near by. The tune of this harp is filled in by some cheap personal reference, not worth notice. But this paragraph might have been conceived out of the mirrorism that sometimes illumines the eyes of human cheapness.

The fact of the matter is that if a breeder should allot but $65 for the breeding, care and keeping of each yearling barn on his farm, he would have, when the foals were a year and a half old, a collection of starved, stunted, non-descript animals that would be as little like thoroughbreds as the cayuse pony. It was by this sort of starvation that the cayuse was evolved, and I don't believe that the breeders of race horses can gain anything from the application of principles that has resulted in retrogression.

The Horseman's man, of course, can be dense on something about which he knows little—breeding and thoroughbreds—without general damage. But he goes to divination. His going takes the insolent form of telling the source of my figures, which I have not yet told; all such presumers necessarily go to the realms of misstatement and libel. Here is the impertinent guess:

"On investigation I learn that the man who gave the eccentric writer the figures is a South Water street commission man, who, in partnership with a practical horse breeder, has started a farm in Kentucky, placing at the head of the stud a horse that, according to the public prints, had better be hauling a coal cart than perpetuating his own inferiority, for he has raced a great number of seasons without winning a race, has cost his owners thousands of dollars, and ought to have been shot years and years ago as an absolutely worthless cucumber of the ground.

The books from which my figures came were those of Hinde & Baker of the Millbrook Farm, Ky. The sire of my yearlings was Patron, who died a few days ago.

Prices, equine and journalistic, are low nowadays. Both markets are overstocked, the latter most, as is evident when such critics as the Horseman's is turned loose to do his catch-as-can worst. Mr. Campau, a well-bred and intelligent man, should hedge him in.

The Horseman's tra-la-lait isn't as deep as a teaspoon. After a mere hint to him of apology as toward the South Water street man, who isn't known, but who has been abused, I would suggest, that the critic has dodged the price, in an imbecilic sort of way that suggests wilful dodging. Mr. W. R. Allen is his latest authority on the price of raising two-year-olds. The issue is yearlings. Mr. Allen is an eminently respectable trotting horseman. But he's a millionaire, too. Millionaires don't manage and are not provident. To be frank, to the extent of modern English as she and it is applied, they are "marks." Then, too, the general business of thoroughbreddom is far better conducted than in the other line. When DAILY RACING FORM quotes figures, they are the figures of honest intention and from an honest source. The accounts of Messrs. Hinde & Bader, who did own Patron and own some thirty-five choicely bred mares, show that for $66.50—outside the farm investment at the Forks of Elkhorn—they can raise a yearling at home from their own sire and dam and place it in the sales ring at Cincinnati or Louisville. For $70 or so the same yearlings—some twenty in numbers—could be put in their selling place here. Millbrook raises more than horses. Even its field is home grown, with a profitable margin outside home consumption. One cannot well discuss personality and English with the Horsemanite. Such are but provincial topics. One might, on a pinch, go to them though. On evidence, too, it is difficult to mark out a line for the discussion of fitness or birth of any reasonably high class kind, because such a discussion requires some national foundation, which—what is it—Ali Baba, Allantoid, or Allandale—does seem to have.

The Eastern turf writers again tell us that Sir Walter is a wonder. He is, they say, sure to beat Navarre. Bosh! He never could, at any reasonable weights. Or Clifford, and eight or ten more. Sir Walter was an honest and high—not first—class two year old, and a three year old of the first division of the second grade. Since 1893 he has been a counterfeit. The horse evidently has ideas of his own. Certainly he isn't reliable. He might win the Brooklyn—or the Suburban or Metropolitan. It has got to be the fashion to group the three. Why, the Lord, or turf director of us all, only knows. The Metropolitan doesn't size up right, even though the two former has been sized down. Sir Walter's in it well enough. But he isn't the sort that can be trusted and one must pass him up in calculating early handicap chances.

What a lot of bosh is being printed about Governor Mathews and his intentions toward the Indiana tracks this year! The common sense of it all is that, if the provisions of the Seller's law are kept, there is legality of the purest kind about Lake Side, Forsyth, and Sheffield. Mr. Mathews is being used by news fakirs in a most unfair way. He does not say one tenth of the words he is quoted for. He couldn't—and keep his voice. Of course he'll insist on Indiana law being kept. So will Attorney General Ketcham. So too will the race track folks. Their interest runs that way. All around the unanimity is most happy.

GOOD RACING AT MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 10.—The racing at Montgomery Park to-day was interesting. Four of the finishes were close, and in the fifth event it was hard to separate Hibernia Queen and Santa Maria. Scherrer rode a pretty hand finish on the former and was given the race, but it looked as though the other horse won. The starting was much better but there is still a chance for improvement. Caldwell used the flags and the machine, consequently there were no horses left. Goose Liver had all he could do to win the 2-year-old event, and had Albert Vale been off on an even terms he would have won. Rodegap has had hard luck with his horses at the post. Knapp's ride on Roy Lochiel looked bad.

SIR VASSAR A DERBY STARTER.

INGLESIDE RACE TRACK, SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 10.—Tom Griffin ships Sir Vassar to Louisville Sunday. He will ride the colt himself in the Kentucky Derby. J. A. MURPHY.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

The report that Pettingill was to start at the Aqueduct wasn't true. Tom Flynn will do the work. The track's dates are: May 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 11; October 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12.

V. L. Kirkman, of the Oak Hill Farm, has a suckling colt by Palestine—Black Girl, that is snow white all over with the exception of a couple of red spots on his ears and the top of his head. He is perfectly formed and is as hardy as any of the foals at the farm.

Mr. Pomeroy who has done the outside racing work for the Herald and Times-Herald for the past three years, will be Secretary Clem Creveling's assistant this season in the general administration of the Indiana tracks. The selection is a wise one.

George Siler will attend to the work of supplying the newspapers with the doings of each racing day. That too is a proper appointment.
